Allison in the Netherlands

Allison Bown
Co-Founder of TWC

What a remarkable opportunity to explore what God is doing in the Netherlands through the New Man message. This three day Aglow National conference drew women and men from across this nation to gather for worship, community and training. Aglow groups all over Holland have been working with the Game Changer and Life Changer materials Graham developed for Aglow.

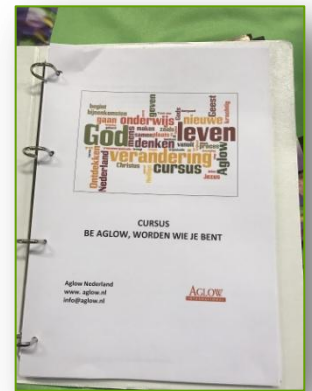

This was an opportunity to come alongside them, get a first hand look at their process and support their unique journey.

The focus of “Celebration” was an excellent one. It put all of the New Man development through the lens of joy—which was why they invited me. Some of their leaders had read “Joyful Intentionality” and even in another language, they were encouraged by the spirit of delight and practical applications. They also wanted to hear a woman’s perspective on the subject, which of course, delighted me!

Their wonderful leadership group, led by Phia Kamp, had excellent questions and discoveries to share. We started with a day of leadership training—the first they had ever offered! I had asked to meet with the leaders if possible and was very thankful to have the dedicated time to do so. It’s always interesting to see how people are processing change. We introduced them to the prophetic picture activation, as well as discussing the nature of Kingdom leaders as facilitators and mentors of the process that makes us rich.

I did three sessions during the main conference. The first was a new teaching from an inheritance word I’ve had for many years. It focused on Nehemiah and the strength of joy in embracing our process with God.

My passion coming into this time was to walk in my sonship, but come as a servant. While it has been over 30 years since I worked at a denominational Bible college here, I still remember the stance of Americans who felt their way was the best way.

Graham and Aglow's Game Changer material in Dutch.

Continued...

I love the Dutch culture and had many Dutch students – so I knew the wonderful, pragmatic, direct nature that they would likely come with. But I also knew the joy that they travel in and sure enough, during that first session on Nehemiah, someone called out in Dutch, “We have a song about that!” Then spontaneously, hundreds of people began to sing “The Joy of the Lord is My Strength” in their native language.

It was one of those wonderful Holy Spirit moments where you know He is making the heart connections for the journey ahead.

The next morning, the primary focus was on the joy of displacement. Instead of trying to renovate the old man that is dead, filling up on the Truth of God to displace the lies that are not bringing freedom. As Graham has taught us, it’s not the truth if it doesn’t set you free.

To illustrate this principle, I had them put a large plastic tub on stage, two pitchers of water and a clear glass. I had brought food dye from home (wrapped in 14 layers of baggies) and used a version of Eric’s visual aid to illustrate the point. The water in the glass was clear, until the old habits of the old man began to cloud it. For each one mentioned, a drop of dye was added.

But now I explained, I wanted to get the old mindsets out. How can you separate the dye from the water? You can’t. You can only displace it. So as I poured one pitcher, then the next – and as the glass began to overflow and clear, you could literally hear the chains dropping in people’s mindsets!

They got it! All throughout the rest of the conference, people hugged and kissed me over “The glass – I get it – fill UP!!!”

I also loved that the team made sure to have Dutch speakers included. Phia did a wonderful session, and several of the team offered workshops. Saturday night was led by a delightful man, Hans Mars – a Dutch Reformed minister and theologian who had a radical encounter with the Holy Spirit about two years ago.

He connected with Randy Clark and is now travels almost constantly to Dutch churches who are hungry for what he’s discovered. I loved his down to earth manner, his ability to make the things of God so beautifully natural and his humble heart.

This young husband and father of three had so many questions about the New Man and we had a marvelous discussion before the evening service. He asked to stay in touch as this ground swell in Holland grows, as it seems to be doing.

Getting ready to displace some mindsets!

With translator Eveline Bakker and National President Phia Kamp

The final service was my favorite. It was build from your intel and the ending prophetic word was beautifully on target, inspired by many of the pieces you had given me.

Your prayers both before and during these days were greatly appreciated, as it was a good fight pretty much from the beginning. My heart decided to do a few interesting things the first couple of days and when it refused to straighten up and fly right, I simply prayed for folks who had heart issues that sometimes caused them weakness. After that, it was fine.

It's the training of a warrior that you all know. We will find a way to win!

The final day, my scratchy voice left completely. The morning of the final service, I literally had no voice at all. I laughed as I tried to warm it up, knowing that these days were the fulfillment of a prophetic word from 1995, that I would be a "voice to the nations." I chuckled as the Holy Spirit poked fun at me and said, "I didn't say what the quality of that voice would be."

I decided that if I had to whisper the meeting to my outstanding translator, Eveline, I would. After all, it was the Dutch voice they needed to hear most and I was quite willing for this to be a sign of that. I was plied with all kinds of teas and potions, but it was still pretty sketchy... until I began. It was rough around the edges, but I had a voice all the way through the concluding prophetic word.

When I finished and left the platform, someone asked me a question. When I went to respond, I discovered I had no voice at all. It would not return for three days.

I will be forever grateful for the opportunity to have invested in this team and the Netherlands.

The days Kelly Megonigle and I spent acclimating beforehand were certainly filled with fun, but powerful as well. The message of the New Man is global and people are hungry - very hungry.

Thank you for the exceptional intel and your powerful prayers. All my thanks to Kelly, who was the only one to know of my physical challenges and made sure I always had what I needed, when I needed it.

I don't know when I'll be on a platform again. It may be a while. If it is, then I can't have imagined a better experience of partnership with the Holy Spirit and all of you. You rock.

- Allison

Wonderful Margaret - a true champion with Kelly doing the picture activation.

Christine Casten

Executive Director of TWC

The Warrior Class joyfully welcomes the invitation to walk into new territories. We continually seek the new territory God opens before us and live out the process of exploration. We find ourselves in a new territory this year and continue to explore this ground.

As pioneers and explorers, we have the joy of discovery, continually uncovering the treasure of what lies in our new ground. What this means for us is that we walk off our newly charted map and begin to sketch out new ones.

Our veteran members know this well. We step into our breakthrough, discover what the new territory looks like and begin the process of establishing this ground. For more on this process of exploration, we have a Training Journal dedicated to what it means to explore and pioneer: Training Journal #13: The Nature of Exploration.

What does this mean? What must we do with it? Yes, those are the current questions of the moment. We learn as we go.

As a contrast, the typical release of new “programs” works this way: leaders develop each step of a set plan, define a specific goal and then “roll it out” with expectations of what it will look like and how others will conform to it.

The Warrior Class is not about working through a pre-determined, pre-defined program. We develop an infrastructure to support exploration of what this new thing is and can become. We are about finding unique ways to train, grow, mature and develop. Our Game Changer nature rises as we fully embrace the innovative approach birthed through the transformation process.

What does this mean for TWC? It means that EVERYONE is a part of reinvention. It means we all have a voice in what is working and what we are still learning along the way. This means we are all learning together and we tap into the collective wisdom of our learning process.

Through our choices to walk off the known map, we discover a great freedom in this process of exploration. We get to experience the joy of the creativity and creation. We capture the things God tosses toward us so we can expand and mature. We step past the map of known, predictable, and predetermined. We move toward exploration, capturing the newly discovered and celebrating the unique blueprints set aside for the kingdom explorers we are.

Posting Our Blogs

The blogs on our website share warrior perspectives and journeys from Allison, Christine and our members. Our focus is to share a bit about our community and encourage those who would like to know more about a warrior lifestyle. We base our blogs from The Way of The Warrior book. As you know there are thousands of blogs we can write from that one resource alone!

These blogs put our TWC experience into words. They offer a way for us to share the excitement and anticipation we feel for our individual journeys. They give our members a way to express their excitement and training. We get to celebrate this with them. But, we also want to share it with others who are friends, family and beyond!

As you know, our TWC Facebook pages are private. So, if you click on the arrow that says, “Share this post” from our TWC page the content is visible on your feed, but it is not visible to others outside of TWC. Only those who are TWC members can see it!

Here’s some information on how to share the blogs on Facebook:

1. Share from Christine Casten’s personal page. She changes the settings to public so all can see and share the post indefinitely.
2. Copy the blog URL (address) only in our Facebook post and paste it into your comments on your page. It will look something like this and be above the box with the picture from the blog: <http://www.twclass.org/way-of-the-warrior/fearlessness>. Then, on your post, at the bottom right, click the button and change the setting to public. This should only change your settings for this post. Once you paste the address in your post, Facebook typically generates the picture and link.
3. Go to our Twclass.org page. Click on the blog page. Click on the blog you want to share and open that page. Go to the top of the window in the search box. Select the address and copy it. Even though it will only say, “Twclass.org” when you paste the address on your Facebook page, it will generate the rest of the address like the one you see in option 2. Then, on your post, at the bottom right, click the button and change the setting to public. Post it!

Key Territory: Empowering Grace & New Testament Nature of God

GRACE...YES, IT'S REALLY THAT GOOD!

- Grace has a name and a face, Jesus.
- Grace is abundantly given in copious amounts and meant to be received.
- It comes with acceptance, freedom and permission granted.
- It entails fullness.
- Grace invites.
- Grace loves to partner.
- Grace opens something up.
- Grace is a conduit and facilitator.
- Grace enables and empowers.
- Grace convicts but never condemns.
- It disempowers offense and opens up ways of God's heart.
- It is the means of salvation and the embodiment of Christ with truth.
- It is an aspect of God's nature and dictates everything God does.
- Grace is a way of relationship.
- It is a language.
- It is a way to see and a filter of life.
- It is a value ruling power that governs us.
- It is a means to reign in life along with righteousness.
- Thankfully, we are living in days of grace here on earth. Praise the Lord!

The days of Old Testament ways of God do not exist post Christ resurrection. All of God's anger and judgment was placed on Jesus at the cross. The after affect is grace upon grace. Yahoo and thank you Jesus!! It is eluded to in David's life and enjoyed from Adam up until Moses declared the Ten Commandments. How does reading the Old Testament through the lens of grace change your understanding of God?

What if...we were consumed with grace as a daily experience/encounter that consumes our mind, will and emotions?

- What happens if we interpret everything through the lens of grace?
- What mindsets and perspectives would form as a result?
- How would our language change?
- How would that affect our relationship with God and others?

Enjoy praying our Warrior Declarations in Training Journal #16 individually for this territory and your revelations and encounters with Grace!

“Warrior Team is a group of warriors, pioneers and explorers who continue to strengthen their training and community through a focused, self-paced training. We climb to new altitudes, acclimate and passionately pursue our growth through all training levels and modules. We are team coached and given opportunities for training and idea exchanges through conversational calls, specialty training, and an increasing variety of media.”

Warrior Team Buddies Thrive

On January 29, as a Warrior Team, we opened a new possibility for all Warrior Team members: “Let’s Connect – Warrior Team Buddies”. We had 28 members join this call. We had so many members who asked good questions and offered great insight. Then we had a great response on Facebook where several Buddies connected. This WT Buddy Connection is still available on the Facebook page: you can continue to post and ask others if they are interested in connecting as buddies.

Several buddies are also open to dividing into smaller teams of two or three as more join.

You can ask when and how they meet to know if you can join a group that meets in person, on the web, through Facebook messaging or email. These are not official TWC training groups, but we have just added Veteran Buddy Suggestions for Developing Warrior Team Buddies as a help on our website (Teams/Warrior Team/Veteran). We have several other helpful notes to support your Buddy relationship development.

Here is a testimony/comment from Susan Baker who stepped into the Buddy relationship with ease:

Susan Baker here. Lori, your genuine desire to help us connect is beautiful. Just reporting: At our January call on this subject, you asked people to respond with their preferences and time zones. As requested, I scanned the replies and identified people who had some interest in telephone conversations. Seven of us have been in touch and are now dividing into 2 groups, incorporating guidelines from the March Member Update. I've also begun a connection with someone who has been on several Training Calls with me.

If you’re learning style is verbal, social, you prefer working on a team, feel isolated or alone, reach out on our Warrior Team Facebook page for a Warrior Team Buddy.

Lens Change Through ~ Lectio Divina

We are diving deeper on our Champions Team Training calls, exploring topics and sharing our experiences with greater depth and focus. In February I had the honor of hosting a training call on Lectio Divina.

Lectio Divina, which in Latin means “Divine Reading,” is a practice of engaging with the Holy Spirit while reading, meditating and praying in scripture that was developed by monks dating back to 300AD. Graham encourages this method of studying scripture in several of his books including “Beholding and Becoming” and “Approaching the Heart of Prophecy.” He recommends using this practice for key Bible passages the Lord has highlighted to you, for instance, inheritance words or prophecies that include scripture. Lectio Divina is also part of Level 2 Training, Module 1.

On this training call we talked about the background history of Lectio Divina and how to apply this technique of studying and meditating on scripture. Graham often talks about his experience with Lectio Divina in his inheritance word of Psalm 91.

It engages the Holy Spirit as mentor and teacher in reading the scriptures, listening to His voice speaking to us, bringing us deeper into the revelation of His Word.

All of us on the call shared our own experiences as we have practiced Lectio Divina. Reading and studying scripture was slowed down and contemplated with prayer. This led often to complete lens changes from what had been previously thought about the scripture. Dwelling on a few words at a time brought Champions to a place of wonder.

Performance was laid down as expanded revelation and new discoveries were opened up.

A process of ebb and flow in the scripture lead to deeper intimacy. The scripture became an access point to the presence of God leading to a place of worship. Knowing the heart of God and our own identity was expanded. Healing took place in heart and body. We were all changed as we encountered the Holy Spirit in the Living Word!

Website Feature of the Month

Warrior Talk

In our own personal process of growth, our upgrades in mindsets and perceptions usually result in a different language to describe where we are. TWC is no different. We have continued to embrace our development and have found words that describe where we are now. Over the course of our journey, these words contain a wealth of Graham's and Allison's teaching, expanded revelation and the mindsets we have embraced. But, sometimes we just need a refresher in how those words, "Warrior talk," apply and are defined for our day to day.

We have developed just the tool for you! On our website, under the "Resources" tab, scroll down and highlight "Quick Guide to TWC Terms." This page contains some of our key words. We include expanded definitions to give you a better grid for how they are used and what they mean. We also include the resource in case you want to go back and listen to the background of what makes that word so significant to TWC.

Examples from our website, Resources/Quick Guide to TWC Terms:

Identity: Is who you are, regardless of circumstances. It's how you show up in Christ. It's what marks you out in the Spirit as being different from other people. It's what sets you apart for a particular purpose. It is a combination of your personality and your persona. Each aspect of our identity has specific permissions, favor and provisions for us to discover, explore and grow into. Identity develops from our devotional life with God into our ministry expressions.

Resources: Identity & Inheritance, Living in Your Truest Identity, Establishing Your Inner Compass

Identity Statements or "I am" Statement: (Level 1 Training) You write out your persona; how heaven sees you in statements. ID statements are often found in our prophetic words & inheritance scriptures. It may also include how your identity impacts others.

Example: "I am a Warrior who relishes the fight."

Indulgence: God's delight in luxuriating in His fondness and affection for you. It is the reality of His passionate desire for relationship with us. It is where we learn to work hand in hand with the Holy Spirit. It's an expression of the favor of God in our lives.

Resource: "Latitude & Indulgence" prophetic word & Permission Granted conference.

Inheritance: The fullness of all that God has for us in our present and in our future. It is fixed in God's heart. He knows who we are and who we will become. Often the provision, blessing and authority of our inheritance is located next to crisis, enemy activity or human opposition. It is ultimately where we want to live from and is attracted to our true identity.

MEMBER SPOTLIGHT:

“The power of this lion behind me was immense. His roar alone was soul-shaking. As one of the keepers said, it’s quite a feeling to know you’re just a few feet from certain death! This photo reminds me that our Best Friend who walks with us is a Lion—and He’s certainly NOT a tame Lion, but He is GOOD!”

Meg & Rod Miller

About me: As a transplant from Portland, OR to Vancouver, B.C., I’ve lived half of my life in the US and half in Canada, with a couple years spent in Egypt. As a Cascadian at heart, I carry identity traits from my home region: I am an explorer, forerunner and dreamer who loves an adventure.

Currently, I’m snowbirding in Phoenix, AZ, to continue in relationship with a fellow TWC-er I met at the Epiphany conference, Rod Miller.

In the first years after hearing Graham’s teachings, I went to the Brilliant Perspectives website on several occasions, searching for a way that I could gather with likeminded people and pursue Graham’s teachings more intentionally. I remember seeing Graham’s personal mentoring sessions and seriously considering taking advantage of that opportunity! At one point, I discovered a small link at the bottom of the website about the Warrior Class—I knew this discovery was why I had felt drawn to visit the website. I love the experience TWC provides of connecting with others who are pursuing this life with passion and focus.

Becoming the Beloved: The simple truth is, until I started listening to Grahams’ teaching, I did not truly grasp how truly good and relentlessly loving God is. I would have said those words—“God is good and loving”—but I would not have known them in the intimate depth that I do today.

In addition, the Becoming the Beloved teaching helped restore a truth to me that had suffered a blow from negative experiences—that love really is the most powerful force in the universe. As Graham puts it, “love is the more excellent way.” I am learning to trust again that love is the most powerful response in any situation.

What part of God's nature are you discovering?

My favorite aspect of the nature of God right now is how joyful and confident He is as my Partner. Everything is an adventure to Him, everything is possible, He’s not afraid of mistakes, He’s full of brilliant ideas and He wants to help with everything: vision, strategies, planning, prioritizing, focus and execution. He is the most confident, fun and exuberant person to have in your corner ever!

In what ways are your thoughts and language being upgraded in TWC?

In The Epiphany talks, Grae mentions that one factor that might land you in a “wilderness” is a mind always set on struggle. I have begun to see that there has been a wilderness area in my mind, one where I had a tendency to look for struggle. I could no longer see through the lens of the goodness of God. I could no longer see with expectation because of bitter things that had happened to me. There was a negative neural pathway, if you will, that I would always find myself on, waiting for the other foot to fall, expecting to be disillusioned again.

Now, I am seeing that the key to disempowering past disappointments is to get in touch with a new set of expectations —God’s expectations for us—where He tells us about our future that HE already sees.

The way out of the expectation of disappointment is therefore through our prophetic words and promises. They create expectation (faith)—as a lens to look through—so that we no longer look through the lens of past disappointment. What a yahoo moment!
